Solarsense voted company of the year

Stephen Barrett, receiving the award, with Jennifer Stanley Smith and Jack Daniells of Solarsense from the judge in charge of the company category Richard Nourse.

THE Renewable Energy Association, the national organisation which represents renewable energy producers and promotes the use of all forms of renewable energy in the UK, has voted Brockley-based Solarsense their Company of the Year.

Solarsense, who have been installing solar throughout the South West region since 1994, was "the industry participant which has done most during the year to advance UK renewables", according to the award. They were up against stiff competition from prominent nationwide organisations including Barfoot Energy, Drax Power and Sevenoaks Energy Academy.

The judges said Solarsense not only stand out in the UK as long established and experienced solar installers, but also take the benefits of solar to the developing world with their annual charity project work taking direct action with solar power.

The fact that Solarsense is a regional company makes this an even more important success and MD and founder Stephen Barrett was overjoyed to get this national recognition, which for him represents an acknowledgement of more than 15 years of hard work and dedication to solar power.

He's pictured with Annette Lawrence from Solarsense at the awards dinner. Solarsense were also shortlisted for Installer of the Year.
